If there is a contract due date, payment should be on that date. If there is no contract, the due date is 10 days. The farmer has only 40 days after the due date. A claim should be filed the day after the due date. This would not necessarily mean that action is undertaken immediately but that the claim would be on file if payment is not forthcoming but means that the seller can collect on the bond. The rules for filing with the federal P.A.C.A. are similar. Therefore, it would be appropriate to file a claim after 10 days.

The laws do not protect the farmer unless he is willing to do two things: 1. He makes sure the buyer is licensed and 2. He files timely against the proceeds of the bond and the trust.
